CLARKE WILSON IS TRIED FOR KILLING OF EVIE IRY LAST J

The Pistol and the Dying Statement
Court—The Character of the Man
the Woman Brought Up.

The trial of Clarke Wilson for the killing of Evie Iry was taken up in superior court yesterday fore Judge Richard Clark presiding. The circumstances of the case are familiar to newspaper readers, and the evidence yesterday developed nothing new or unexpected.

It was early in the forenoon of June 15 this year, that Wilson, going over to his farm, found Evie Iry with three small children picking blackberries upon his land. He objected before to her picking berries on his land, and upon this occasion the two women quarreled, and the woman was dying from the effects of the wound inflicted by the pistol.

After the shooting Wilson quietly got on his mule, leaving the woman lying on the field and screaming with pain, and rode to his house where he remained until he was arrested about two hours later.

Wilson appeared in court yesterday with a changed since the fatal day in June.

The first witness was Willie Try, son of the woman that was killed. The children of the woman, who were present at the shooting, were young to be introduced as witnesses. They testified that as they were going to the house (the Wilson) ordered her to leave. The woman refused, and after a few words, he drew a pistol and fired. The woman started to run, and Wilson fired a second shot as he ran. He fired a second shot as he ran. The woman fell. He then picked up the woman and struck her with it. The little boy ran off after his mother. The woman was taken to the house of Green Wood, near Belmont. The cross examination left the boy's testimony unshaken.

Dr. W. C. Abernathy, the physician that testified the woman, testified next. He re-

"dying statement" of the woman. As a fact, the statement was written several days before she died, but it is substantially the same as the statement published in THE OREGONIAN, and corroborated the evidence of the boy.

Mr. J. Walker Wood next testified that he heard the two shots fired, and went to the field, where he found the woman lying and groaning with pain.

Messrs. W. D. Siggins, Mr. Smith, C. Huff and Squire Casey testified to the character Wilson has always borne, and that they have never known him to be drunk or otherwise deranged.

The prisoner himself then took the stand and made his statement. He testified that he had been bound by the negroes to keep off his land. When he encountered that morning and told her to leave she said to him and then began to cry. When he placed the mule between her and the woman. She then threw her arms and legs wildly about and began cutting at him with a knife. (Wilson) got loose and as the woman was cutting at the neck at the prisoner, he showed a disposition to continue the fight.

fred again and the woman fell. He indicated to the jury three or four places on the floor where she would have fallen if he had thrown her him. He did not show the scars, but marked the places on his coat.

A witness named Emanuel Freeman next introduced. He has been in jail for weeks confined in jail with Wilson, swore that just after the woman was sent to see her and she made a statement to him. The statement he recited correctly, but Wilson's statement was very particular. The witness excited a crowd of amusement by his embarrassed way of testifying.

"How did you happen to go there and how did you ask Solicitor Hill."

"Who? me?" asked the dorky.

"Yes, you."

"Me and her b'longed to de same church."

"And she told you she threw a nigger Wilson?"

There was no answer.

"You say she told you she threw a n Wilson?"
"Sah?"
The question was repeated. A look most intense astonishment settled down negro's face.
"Who? me?"
"Yes; did she tell you that?"
"Who? Dat 'oman?"
This was the last witness. Solicitor
Hill made the argument for the state

Mr. Walker followed for the defense prisoner paid the closest attention, and long sigh of relief as Mr. Walker concluded his argument.

At a late hour last night the jury returned a sealed verdict.

THE LOCAL STAGE.

The Wallick company appeared in "Cattle King" yesterday afternoon and evening to good business.

Grau's Company in the Black Hussars
Tonight this beautiful opera of the successful of the last season, will be presented by the Grau Comic Opera company, in a manner which will please the most fastidious. The dispatch of the Macon, published in THE CONSTITUTION yesterday morning, expresses in a few lines the enthusiastic reception given to the troupe in that city. The great satisfaction of the Macon dilettanti according to that dispatch, it was a great treat.

company is good, the costumes are elegant, the chorus is perfect and the ladies are beautiful. The company is very expensive and has over 40 people. After the published testimony of the press of Richmond, Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah, Macon, there is no need to more upon the merits of the performance since the people that "The Black Hussar" has of their patronage. A big house will doubt the performance.

The San Francisco Post of Saturday, May 18, 1888, says:

The Bush street is having a good run with a romantic Irish play called The Ivy Leaf, which is named from the fact that a leaf is used as a lure to the heroine into trouble. There is a deal of interesting work in the play, and the comedian who has the leading role is the best on the stage, not excepting Scanlan. There is plenty of good dancing in the piece, and some singing.
